Description
The Master of Arts degree in History offers students the opportunity for advanced study in a variety of areas. Coursework emphasizes interpretation, methodology and original research. Students who anticipate continuing their graduate study beyond the M.A. should pursue one of the thesis tracks; non-thesis options are available for those who do not expect to go on to doctoral work.

The History major comprises the following concentrations:

- The History concentration history allows students the opportunity to conduct historical inquiry, research, and analysis at the highest level. While students will be able to develop a core competence in their chosen field of the study, our program requires that M.A. students also enroll in courses that detail the histories of regions and times far removed from one’s central interests. Students may also pursue interdisciplinary work in cognate fields composed of courses in outside disciplines. Those who choose the thesis option, which is required of students on graduate assistantships, will produce an approximately 100 page M.A. thesis based on original primary source research that engages a research question with historiographical significance. Our Kent program aims to produce educated scholars committed to historical empathy and in possession of critical thinking and communication skills honed by rigorous training—talents that help make our graduates successful whether they pursue a career in academia or the private and public sectors.
- The History for Teachers concentration is for teachers interested in the advanced study of history. Coursework is focused on current scholarship and approaches to history. While the concentration’s focus is not in history pedagogy, it is designed to encourage the application of current historical scholarship to the work responsibilities of the practicing teacher. The program provides school professionals with a structured but flexible approach to analyzing and teaching history while permitting interdisciplinary work in related fields or areas particularly relevant to students’ professional objectives.
- The Public History concentration prepares students for work in museums, historical societies, business and wherever the expertise of a professional historian is needed. The interdisciplinary program includes at least one internship.

Graduation Requirements

Course grades help to measure student performance. Only work of B grade or better is considered “passing” at the graduate level. Any students whose grades are deficient are dismissed. The culmination of the program’s writing component for those students intending to go on to doctoral work is the completion of a substantial thesis based on original primary-source research and the oral defense of that thesis.
