Description
The School of Communication Studies offers programs of graduate study leading to the Master of Arts degree. The M.A. degree program is intended to provide a broad spectrum of knowledge about human communication in various social contexts and ways in which information is produced and processed. The school also collaborates with the College of Business Administration to offer a M.A./M.B.A. dual degree program.

The Master of Arts in Communication Studies prepares individuals to pursue a doctorate degree. It also prepares individuals for non-academic careers in which a broad understanding of communication theory and research is desirable. The M.A. program focuses on the social and behavioral study of communication theory and research. Students may specialize in one or a combination of two of these areas of study:

- Global Communication
- Health Communication
- Interpersonal Communication
- Mediated/Mass Communication

Students are able to choose one of four degree completion options that best fit their career needs:

- Thesis
- Coursework only
- Project
- Internship

Review of assistantship applications begins January 15th for fall semester and November 15th for spring semester. For more information, visit the school’s Web site at www.kent.edu/comm.

The M.A. Communication Studies/M.B.A. dual degree program is designed for students and professionals whose career goals focus on communication, particularly global communication and provides direction and leadership in economic and business development processes.

For additional studies beyond the M.A. degree, refer to the CCI Ph.D. program description.
