Description
The Master of Library and Information Science degree prepares students for professional positions in public, academic special and school libraries; archives; museums; and other types of information agencies, organizations and companies. Many M.L.I.S. graduates go on to positions in other areas of the information field besides libraries — in research, for example, or publishing, information management, competitive business intelligence and more. An accredited M.L.I.S. degree is the basic requirement for professional employment in most libraries and information centers.

The Library and Information Science major includes the following optional concentration:

- The School Library Media concentration provides the opportunity for students to apply for multi-age licensure in school library media. The curriculum includes educational technology courses within the College of Education, Health and Human Services.

In addition, students can concurrently pursue a dual degree option with either the Master of Business Administration degree or the Master of Education degree (Educational Technology major, School Library Media concentration). Each program makes an independent admission decision. For further information about dual degree program, see the specific program section in this catalog.
