Description
The Bachelor of Science degree in Public Relations leads students to many career paths, from corporate boardrooms and creative agencies to sports arenas, the halls of Congress, global nonprofits, hospitals, fashion runways, and well beyond. Graduates leave grounded in the practice of responsible advocacy with a firm grasp of inclusive communication practices necessary in 21st century workplaces. Kent State boasts the only public relations program in Ohio that is both certified by the Public Relations Society of America (PRSA) and accredited by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communication (ACEJMC).

The public relations major is rooted in professionalism, with a focus on developing writing and critical thinking skills and building students' understanding of multimedia storytelling. Students develop skills in written, digital, verbal and visual communications, as well as in research and measurement of communication effectiveness. Students are trained to deliver messages through social media, websites, podcasts, videos, press releases and other media tools, events, speeches, printed materials, public policy and more.

Numerous hands-on learning opportunities allow students to develop plans, strategies and tactics that would be produced in the public relations field. Often, projects relate to actual client communication challenges. In campaign projects, students complete research and create and present a public relations plan for a real client. In addition, they are required to complete 150 hours of a professional internship.

Public relations students have numerous opportunities to gain relevant experience. They can apply for positions at two student-staffed agencies, Flash Communications and IdeaBase. Flash Communications is a student PR agency located in Kent State's University Communications and Marketing division and managed by a full-time PR faculty member. IdeaBase, an integrated marketing and communications firm, is staffed by students majoring in public relations, advertising, design and other disciplines. Public relations students are often recruited to apply their skills at a range of campus jobs. Students are encouraged to become part of Kent State's nationally recognized independent student media, which provides opportunities to work on Kent State's newspaper, news site, TV station, magazines and radio station.

Students also have the opportunity to be involved with the award-winning Kent State Chapter of the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA). In October 2019, the chapter received the Outstanding Chapter Award at PRSSA's national conference, the second time since 2014 it received PRSSA's highest national honor. Kent State's chapter is one of only 12 'star' chapters in PRSSA and has received nine national awards in 10 years.

Programs in the College of Communication and Information are, by nature, innovative, interdisciplinary and collaborative, which is critical to both professional and scholarly disciplines. Students are educated to work at the intersections of communication, information and technology. Through a core of diverse theory- and practice-based courses, students learn basic concepts that apply across the range of college programs and develop a sense of professional expectations and build toward interdisciplinary thinking and application.

There are many short- and long-term study abroad/away opportunities. For more information contact the Office of Global Education or CCI's coordinator of International Study Programs.
