

BIOETHICS AND HEALTH HUMANITIES - MINOR

College of Sciences and Humanities
 Department of Philosophy

About This Program

The Bioethics and Health Humanities minor engages students with interests and talents in humanities fields who are also interested in various careers in health care. The minor gives students opportunities to explore bioethical questions, including understanding the challenges of various communities in accessing health, as well as health humanities, focusing on expressions of health care concerns in humanities fields.

Students in humanities, social science, health care and science majors emerge from the minor prepared to engage health care and its variations and ethical challenges with invaluable perspective and insights.
